

He has been confined in isolation and deprived of basic medical care for long periods of time. After being allowed to visit him for the first time in eight years, his wife reported that he is in very poor health. Other members of the civil rights organization have followed in Chaviano's footsteps and continued to press the Cuban government for democratic reforms, at great peril to themselves.

Jimmy Carter is a man who is often praised in the media as a "model ex-President" or a "statesman" for his work with Habitat for Humanity. I do believe there is still time for him to make a more positive contribution to the plight of the Cuban people and to American foreign policy regarding Fidel Castro.

Mr. Carter is scheduled to deliver a speech to the Cuban people tonight. His remarks have the potential to do enormous good or to cause further harm. Rather than legitimizing a tyrant and a man who doesn't care for the well-being of his own people; he could advocate positive change for the beleaguered Cuban people.

If Mr. Carter in his speech tonight is looking for a road map to freedom and prosperity for the Cuban people, he need look no further than the words and principles of freedom written by George Mason in the Virginia Declaration of Rights. This document, adopted on June 12, 1776, helped form the basis of our Declaration of Independence and 15 years later in our Bill of Rights as the first amendments to our Constitution.

I would read a few excerpts from George Mason's historic words from various articles of the Virginia Declaration of Rights, which I think are instructive.

Article 1: That all men are by nature equally free and independent and have certain inherent rights, of which, when they enter into a state of society, they cannot, by any compact, deprive or divest their posterity; namely, the enjoyment of life and liberty, with the means of acquiring and possessing property, and pursuing and obtaining happiness and safety.

Article 2: That all power is vested in, and consequently derived from, the people; that magistrates are their trustees and servants and at all times amenable to them.

Article 3: That government is, our ought to be, instituted for the common benefit, protection, and security of the people, nation, or community; of all the various modes and forms of government, that is best which is capable of producing the greatest degree of happiness and safety and is most effectually secured against the danger of maladministration. And that, when any government shall be found inadequate or contrary to these purposes, a majority of the community has an indubitable, inalienable, and indefeasible right to reform, alter, or abolish it, in such manner as shall be judged most conducive to the public weal.

Article 12: That the freedom of the press is one of the great bulwarks of liberty, and can never be restrained but by despotic governments.

Article 16: That religion, or the duty which we owe to our Creator, and the manner of discharging it, can be directed only by reason and conviction, not by force or violence; and therefore all men are equally entitled to the free exercise of religion, according to the dictates of conscience . . .

Those are the words of freedom, and of the inherent rights to which all people are entitled, even if only temporarily subjugated.

Therefore, I call on former President Carter to embrace these truths and to use this unique opportunity to advance these enduring principles of liberty in Cuba.

I urge him to support the Varela Project, which is a petition drive that has collected the 10,000 signatures needed under Castro's so-called "constitution" to force a referendum on whether his government should be allowed to continue.

I call on Fidel Castro to heed the concepts first enunciated by George Mason 226 years ago in the Western Hemisphere, and I also call upon him to schedule free and fair democratic elections on the island of Cuba within the next year.

Mr. President, I will close with more words from George Mason, who said:

There is a passion to the mind of man, especially a free man, which renders him impatient of a restraint."

Mr. Carter has the power to either to fan the flames of those passions and aspirations of the Cuban people, or to throw cold water on them. The choice he needs to make is clear. Do not flinch. Stand strong for freedom!

Thank you. I yield the floor.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about hate crimes legislation I introduced with Senator KENNEDY in March of last year. The Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred April 3, 1991 in Boston, MA. A Northeastern University student was arrested for making anti-Semitic and anti-homosexual death threats. The student, Garrett McAdams, was accused of threatening to kill a Jewish Realtor and bomb the offices of a gay student organization.

I believe that government's first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act of 2001 is now a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation and changing current law, we can change hearts and minds as well.

VOTE EXPLANATION

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I wish to explain my absence from yesterday's vote on the nomination of Paul G. Cassell to be U.S. District Judge for the District of Utah. After spending yesterday working with constituents in Connecticut, I was scheduled to fly back to Washington in time to make the vote. Unfortunately, high wind and tornado threats caused flights into Washington to be cancelled. I ultimately returned to Washington by train and too late to cast my vote. Had I been here, I would have cast my vote in the affirmative.

NATIONAL POLICE OFFICERS WEEK

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, each day our Nation's law enforcement officers step onto the street, putting their lives on the line to protect our communities. These honorable men and women risk so much so that others can feel safe.

New Yorkers owe our State and local law enforcement officers an enormous debt of gratitude. The historic drop in crime that we have seen in the last few years is truly a reflection of their fine work and tireless dedication. The low-crime rate that New York City enjoys today would never have been possible without the extraordinary work of the New York City Police Department.

One small step we can take to begin to repay that debt is ensuring that our men and women in blue are equipped with the tools they need to protect themselves from the constant dangers they face; and that police departments around the country have the additional resources they need meet new demands placed on them.

In the past several months, their responsibility have only grown larger. From the first moments our country saw NYPD officers at the base of the World Trade Center towers, the role of police officers around the country was changed forever. The September 11 terrorist attacks put communities around America on the frontlines in our war against terrorism at home, and our local public safety officers must now be prepared for the unimaginable: biological and terrorist attacks.

We pay tribute to the hard work and sacrifice of our police officers not just this week but every day of our lives as we move freely about our communities, largely uninhibited by fear and danger. We should take a moment to recognize the peace of mind that our local law enforcement officers provides us, and life's precious gifts that come with that assurance.

Public service is one of our country's most noble callings and law enforcement captures that spirit of sacrifice and devotion to community. We thank the families of police officers for their ever present courage and selflessness. To the police officers who uphold our laws and protect our communities from crime, we give our appreciation, admiration and immeasurable pride for the jobs you do every day.
